Continuing collecting effort for the Imperial War Museum
Suzanne Bardgett
I appreciate the harsh, unforgiving view of this museum. I applaud admitting the deliberate ignorance of the Allied Powers. We should have done more.
Thought provoking. Terrible that human beings can and still do behave abominably to each other. We never seem to learn but exhibitions such as this must help us see, I hope!
I excavated and identified the dead in mass graves in Bosnia and Kosovo in 1996/9. (ICTY) I have walked these rooms in tears. So familiar, so familiar…. Thank you for this. I heard so many languages from others walking round. People think they know – until they see an exhibition like this.
Crimes against humanity
An exploration of genocide and ethnic violence
This is the most important place in the museum. I want the visitors to see this first. News on the telly just washes over us. This is now, not the past.

REVEREND ISAAC LEVY

After serving in the Middle East from 1941-1944 Reverend Isaac Levy was appointed Senior Jewish Chaplain to the British Army of the Rhine. He arrived at Bergen Belsen three days after the first British troops entered the camp, and was one of the chaplains who conducted burial services over the mass graves. He played a key role in the provision of relief to those who had survived. Reverend Isaac Levy found this burnt Torah Scroll abandoned in a schoolhouse near Hanover and brought it back to Britain.
